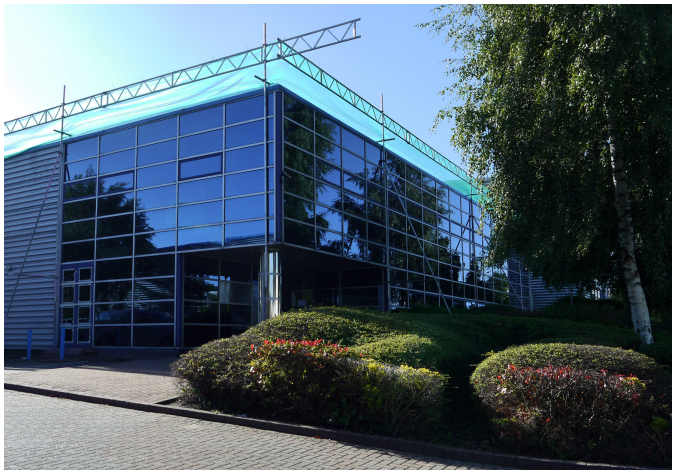
Written by Marco Attard
05. 11. 2013



Custom installation product distributor AWE expands to a new facility in Epsom, Surrey, with a standalone building allowing for increased stock handling as well as as more space for customers, suppliers and staff.

The building incorporates a dedicated training facility complete with integrated equipment, and a showroom for displaying products "like never before" is in the works.

“Asides from the increased warehouse space, by all being based under one roof, it will be a much better environment," AWE managing director Stuart Tickle says. "The building has been called "Alexander House," a family name taken from the founder of the company, my great-grandfather, and my grandfather who later took over."

As well as a new building AWE also got a website redesign-- one promising improved functionality together with a new stock checking and ordering system.

Go AWE Europe