

Optoma Steps Into Audio With NuForce Buy

Written by Marco Attard
19. 11. 2014

Taiwanese projector maker Optoma moves into consumer audio as it buys California-Based NuForce, a vendor of premium audio products such as digital amplifiers, wireless DACs and related technologies.

The financial details of the acquisition are not available.

"Optoma has built its reputation creating high-performing projection products," the company says. "Audio was logical progression for Optoma, bring together great video with equally great sound."

Following the buy NuForce will offer a streamlined portfolio of home cinema products complementing Optoma home projectors, wireless audio systems, digital amplifiers and DACs products.

The Optoma audio range will be available across EMEA from 2015.

Go Optoma Acquires NuForce