TiVo reveals its biggest DVR-- the whole home capable TiVo Mega, an appropriately named STB featuring 24 terabytes of storage, the equivalent of 26000 hours (or 1083 days, or 3 years) of TV.

"TiVo Mega offers more than twelve times the storage of any cable or satellite DVR," the company claims. "TiVo Mega is the solution for the power user who wants to record everything."

Designed for the most hardcore of customers, the TiVo Mega weighs around 20kg and is rack-mountable. It carries 10 hot-swappable RAID 5 HDDs inside a server-style "anodised precision-machined" enclosure, as well as 6 tuners allowing it to record up to 6 channels simultaneously.

To close off the massive package TiVo also includes a lifetime's worth of its subscription-based TV service and a Slide Pro Remote with built-in QWERTY keyboard.

The TiVo Mega hits the market sometime on Q1 2015 for "approximately" $5000.

Go TiVo Unveils Largest Consumer DVR Ever Made