Crestron releases Home OS 3, the update to the smart home operating system the company claims "unlocks the full potential of the Crestron smart home," all with an easy to use interface on both mobile devices and TSW touchscreens.

Home OS 3 also promises "hundreds" of new features, together with "remarkably fast" deployment for installers. It supports multiple homes, with new icons to save favourites and easy access to the most commonly used functions. Customers can personalise the UI using photos of the home to represent rooms, together with other intuitive display features. Enforced end-to-end encryption secures communications.

"Crestron Home OS 3 is the smart way to make more homes Crestron homes. It delivers the speed and simplicity our residential dealers want, which will help them optimize and maximise their business, and the intuitive experience their clients demand," the company says. "Complete projects can be set up and deployed on any scale in a fraction of the time of traditional methods, with no programming needed."
