It appears the reports on Nevo's demise were a little premature-- especially regarding the company's European situation.

That is to say, Universal Electronics will continue supporting the Nevo line through its international distribution partner program. This covers its current Nevo Pro and Custom series-- including the NevoQ50 remote.

The "retirement" reports only effects our friends on the other side of the pond-- UEI will streamline its U.S. activities (through select regional distributors), as part of a business re-assessment exercise.

More for us over here, then.
