Controversial Jeremy Burkhardt is back... he will officially launch his new audio brand at CEDIA 2014 in USA. It's called Origin Acoustics and the website shows now only a logo that is unmistakably his bearded profile in silhouette.

Supposedly the company is working on a product portfolio of home theater speakers, architectural speakers and electronics... yes, kind of like Speakercraft.

He sued Nortek over his no-compete contract because he wanted to acquire outdoor speaker company Soundcast. That deal fell through .

Burkhardt publicly expressed his disappointment with Nortek over their stewardship of Speakercraft-- very publicly. Now Origin Acoustics will be Burkhardt's chance to prove he can do audio better.
