Written by Marco Attard
15. 04. 2015

Control4 launches a new Associated Installer online training program-- providing entry-level technicians with with certification in automation, installation, programming and design.

The free online curriculum is also ideal for Control4 dealers wanting to train employees on basic installation skills via Composer Express, the Control4 mobile configuration and setup tool.

The company says participants can learn how to install and configure one-room home entertainment systems, as well as assist in the provisioning of lighting devices in larger projects in as little as 3 hours.

Associate Installer Certification consists of 4 classes-- Overview of Solutions, Infrastructure for Home Automation, Building Basic Entertainment Solutions and Controlling Wireless Lighting.

“We designed this certification to help our dealers build a technician’s basic competency with Control4 products. Technicians can put their new skills to use immediately with real customer installation work," the company says. "Dealers can evaluate their employees’ technical acumen in the field before opting to expand their training by sending them to Control4’s four-day course on whole-home automation programming."

Go Control4 Rolls Out New Associate Installer Certification