Legrand announces a refresh of the Bticino Classe 100 range with a selection of stylish door entry products aimed at a variety of buildings, all featuring standard two-wire installation.

The cost-effective range offers features, including video feedback and smartphone connectivity. Hard keys to answer and hang up make for more positive engagement and ease of use, while the configurable keys allow for personalised, convenient accessibility for every occupant. The handsets light and flash the appropriate buttons when in use, and the 100X model enables users to quickly and easily connect the handsfree unit to smartphones for increased convenience and security.

"With the Bticino Classe 100, we seek to offer customers a complete and affordable range that suits any number of requirements and allows them to provide end users with an array of easy-to-use functions," Legrand says. "Bringing together economy and style, the range is easy to install thanks to the straightforward two wire installation and, once in place, provides any
