Written by Marco Attard
31. 05. 2017

Trådfri , the smart lighting range from Swedish furniture maker Ikea, gets more control options through compatibility with Amazon Alexa, Google Home and Apple HomeKit.

Previously the lighting range offered control solely through companion app. The Trådfri range offers a variety of products, including a motion sensor kit, dimming kit and LED light panels and doors, with more to be added in the future.

“With Ikea Home Smart, we are challenging everything that’s complicated and expensive with the online home," the retailer says. "By ensuring that our products work with others on the market, we take another step to meet people’s needs and make it easier to interact with the products for the smart home.”

The smart lighting products are available in 340 Ikea stores in over 28 countries.

Go Ikea Trådfri